

THE LETTERS OF DOROTHY L. SAYERS

Marion E. Wade Center, Wheaton College, Wheaton, Illinois.

DOROTHY LEIGH SAYERS

(1893-1957)

Dorothy once wrote about herself: "If you were ever to see me really enthusiastic about anything, it would be about as unmistakable as a tank going into action" (letter to Michael Powell dated February 19, 1947). This dynamic exuberance of Dorothy's is what makes all of her writing distinctive.

The only child of a rector in Huntingdonshire, England, Dorothy L. Sayers was one of the first group of women to be graduated from Oxford University. She received her B.A. and M.A. at the same time. She worked in turn at Basil Blackwell Publishers, at an Educational Bureau in France, and at Benson's advertising agency in London before she was able to support herself with her writing.

Beginning first with poetry and translation, Dorothy Sayers moved on to make a name for herself with her detective fiction and her famous character, Lord Peter Wimsey. From there she wrote several Cathedral Festival Plays and the popular radio drama about the life of Christ, The Man Born to Be King. She also wrote numerous essays and reviews on themes including theology, detection and scholarship. Her last years were spent working on her translation of Dante's Divine Comedy, best known for its vigorous quality and readability.

Her extensive correspondence is characteristic of her writing as a whole, but contains a more personal element not usually found in her published works. The reader of her letters will encounter the boisterous child, the infatuated adolescent, the playful Somervillian, the frustrated career-woman, the budding writer, the concerned wife and mother, the witty Detection Club member, the thoughtful Christian, the serious scholar, the loyal friend and the acerbic recipient of fan-mail. All of these contribute to a better (but never comprehensive) understanding of an undoubtedly remarkable woman.

GUIDE TO USE OF THE DOROTHY L. SAYERS LETTERS AND PAPERS

The Marion E. Wade Center's collection of Dorothy L. Sayers's letters contains thousands of letters to and from Sayers, as well as essays, reviews, talks, and articles by her. These materials comprise over 30,000 pages (typescript, carbon, and handwritten), and date from 1906 to 1957 with a few folders containing items following her death in December 1957.

This guide has been provided to assist the researcher in locating specific letters and/or topics in this collection. In addition, there is a list of correspondence arranged alphabetically by the author/recipient's last name. A folder location is listed to the right of each name.

The Fleming Archive, folders 1-538, was collected and arranged by John Anthony Fleming, Dorothy Sayers's son. Mr. Fleming was in the process of editing these letters for publication, but his untimely death in December 1984 prevented completion of the project. The letters were purchased by the Wade Center in May 1985 from Mrs. Fortuna Fleming, widow of Mr. Fleming (Acq. 85/46a). The Wade Center has retained Anthony Fleming's arrangement of the correspondence. Because his order is neither alphabetical nor chronological, this guide may be used to locate particular articles of interest.

Folder 539 and following contain Sayers letters collected by the Marion E. Wade Center. The folders are titled according to the author's last name and then chronologically within each name.

Note: Some of the reverse sides of Dorothy L. Sayers's letters have fragments of other essays, letters, and notes written by her. It was Sayers's economical habit to use the backs of other writings as scrap paper to make carbon copies of her letters to other people. Related materials such as newspaper clippings, manuscript fragments, etc. may also be included amongst the letters.

This listing continues to be updated as new materials are added to this collection.
